the awful truth becomes apparent. A party of young people fully appreciated the verity of this statement a few evenings ago when the awkwardness of the left hand was humorously caricatured.

A left-handed party was in progress. Every one on entering had his or her right hand slipped into a sling with the encouraging remark that if the arm was raised it would immediately become dislocated. From that time on it might as well have been paralyzed. The first on the list was the drawing of a yellow kid, any flower, a cat, profile of a well-known person, a circle and a cobweb. Any four could be chosen. Of course, the result was highly amus- for a few weeks. ing-some drawings hardly being distinguishable. Others were fairly good, but all showed amateur work, the lines being unsteady and wavering.

The drawing was done on white paper and soft lead pencil. Then followed a clever test, the men displaying quite as much ability as the girls. This was to sew.

Each one was supplied with a threaded deep, but to cover that amount of work. Also to sew on four buttons. Neatness, it was urged, would go far in favor of the

for their cream jars. The right shoulder would rise in sympathy, the feet would unconsciously curl up and assume strange positions. The nerves, too, showed the sign of strain. Several lost their patience and voted the whole thing ridiculous

One tricky 'varsity student sewed two buttons on at once. He placed a button on the right and wrong side of the dimity piece on the same spot, the upright needle catching both at the same time. Prizes were awarded for those most proficient who accomplished their work in the quickest time. These took the form of gun metal golf clubs and horseshoes. This fortunately is shorter than the Nellie Bly version, for if you are wise you can cover the ground in two minutes.

Is It Being Made a Lost Art by the Use of the Typewriter?

Louisville Post. With the almost universal use of the typewriter in correspondence, billing, mercantile papers and in authors' manuscripts has come about the inability of men to read ordinary handwriting. This use of the typewriter may have had something to do with making handwriting more extraordinary than it ever was, but in the days when a certain school of almost illegiole handwriting was so affected by lawyers, physicians, clergymen, journalists and literary men, it is doubtful if the mere lack of practice in present-day penmen

Mr. J. W. Lloyd contributes an article to one of our magazines, in which he proposes that every township in the United States buy and set apart a piece of land, however small, and dedicate it to nature-a place where no wild animal shall ever be molested, tree cut, flower picked or stone removed; where no texts or odious advertisements shall be painted upon the rocks, no initials carved on the trees, no improvements made. In almost every township in the United Staes there is some of the wild waste land, valueless for agriculture, that could be bought for a small sum. The more barren, hilly, rocky, rugged or swampy the the center of the table. There were also in-dividual baskets filled with violets, lilies of nature, the more picturesque to the artistic better suited it would be as a sanctuary of eye. If it contained a great variety of surface, so much the better. It would be vastly superior to the formal park with concrete walks, and signs to keep off the grass. Of course in all places animals actually dangerous to human life would have to be excluded; rattlesnakes and copperheads would certainly be condemned; weasels, also, because they are murderous to poultry and would be equally so to birds and rabbits

When dessert was served, her two little boys, aged, I should say, about ten and eight, were permitted to come to the table. Syracuse Post-Standard. It is an axiom of the old-fashioned doctor that a meat diet once a day is all anyprovided with some description of meat twice or even three times in each twentyfour hours. In the New England States, where on account of the lack of competition fresh meat prices at retail have for many years ranged high, the people have learned close economy in the consumption of animal foods, and find themselves better in health and better in pocketbook on account of their enforced deprivation. In most European countries also to eat meat is the exception rather than the rule even among people engaged in the heaviest manual toil, and those who are able to provide for themselves and families a diet of meat two or three times a week are accounted nabobs among their less opulent
